Hello,

14 July 2016

Good news – you can now connect to the nbnTM network, Australia's exciting new landline phone and internet network. It's designed to give you access to fast and reliable phone and internet services, opening up personal and professional opportunities, no matter where you live.

What the nbnTM network means for you:*

Fast downloads – even when the whole household is online at the same time

Better productivity – access to the speed you need to get things done, fast

A brighter future – the best education tools at your fingertips

The nbnTM network is for your phone too

The nbnTM network is replacing most existing landline phone and internet networks in your area, which will be switched off (existing fibre network services, and some business services may not be affected). Your existing services won't automatically move to the nbnTM network, you'll need to move them through a phone or internet provider before 9 February 2018.[†]

Bring it on

It's time to start experiencing the benefits. Have a read of your 'nbn' connect kit, then contact a phone or internet provider to get started. Find a list of providers in your area over the page, or visit nbn.com.au experience including the speeds actually achieved over the nbnTM network depends on the technology over which services are delivered to your premises and factors outside our control like your equipment quality, software, broadband plans and how your service provider designs its network. [†]Services provided over the network will be replacing phone and internet services provided over most of the existing landline networks, including copper and the majority of HFC networks within the line footprint. Existing fibre networks include in-building, health and education networks. Some special services may not be affected. To find out if your services will be affected, please contact your current phone or internet provider. The switch off date is subject to change.
